SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

This is a collection of small booklets and pamphlets containing recipes for food preparation. The booklets were published by a variety of sources. Some were commercially produced collections of recipes in booklet form; other were produced in conjunction with a particular company's food product literature or in serial form.

More substantial cookbook volumes have been cataloged as books and are available in the library. Recipes provided in conjunction with product information for household appliances and cookware are available in the trade catalog collection. In these instances, the recipes are considered incidental to the information provided on the cookware or appliance, so that they are treated as trade literature rather than recipe booklets.

The items are arranged in chronological order, then alphabetized by title within each year.
